

Discussion Guide for “Where’s the Line?” Ask Better Questions Week 3

What would you do if you learned the world was ending next week? Our answers to that question reveal our ‘happiness gap’ – how far we are from the life we really want. The Corinthian Christians asked Paul whether they should marry given the trials of their culture and the immanent return (they think!) of Jesus. Paul’s advice to them is to be content where they are. Rather than focusing on the greener grass over there, we should focus on what God is calling us to right where we are.

Scriptures for Further Reading

Jonah 3:1-5, 10

Psalm 62:5-12

Mark 1:14-20

1 Corinthians 7:29-31

Epiphany Question:

During this season, spend time each week in prayer and meditation over a question about your calling. This week, sit with the question “What is God calling me to do right where I am?”

Questions for Discussion

1. If the world were ending next week, what would you do differently?
2. In general, how big is your ‘happiness gap’? Where do you feel the least content?
3. Why were the Corinthians so anxious about marriage and singleness? Can you relate to their anxiety?
4. Explain Paul’s advice to them in 1 Corinthians 7:29-31. How does this apply to our happiness gaps today?
5. What is God calling you to do right where you are?